Les Assises de la Sécurité 2017 an edition mirroring a growing market

With 2 850 participants, 170 business partners and 5 100 One-to-One meetings, the 17th edition of Les Assises de la Sécurité ended on Friday 14 October with record numbers. Numerous highlights and high-quality content characterized this meeting of cyber-security professionals.

- Close to 160 workshops addressed topics of current interest (RGDP, cybercrime, the Cloud, etc.) and sharing of experiences (establishment of a SOC, federation of identity, monitoring of critical industrial networks, etc.)
- 11 expert round tables that helped CISOs better understand their daily work, anticipate changes and share their best practices
- 3 keynote speakers featuring iconic sector figures (Philippe Courtot, CEO Qualys; Kevin Walker, CISO at Juniper Networks; Tom Corn, Senior VP Security Products at WMWARE) who shared their vision

At the opening conference, Guillaume Poupard (Director General of ANSSI) has welcomed participants' awareness of cyber security, while recalling that it was essential to remain vigilant, since public and private organizations – and citizens as well – have become potential targets.

Another highlight of Les Assises 2017 was the presence of Keren Elazari, Senior Researcher, Cyber Research Center of the University of Tel Aviv, who defended the role of ethical hackers in cyber security during her conference "The future of security - a hacker's perspective".

Finally, the presence of the CyberTaskForce, of which Les Assises is a member, provided an opportunity for a delegation of members of Parliament and cyber-security experts to discuss these topics and meet sector players.
